

LawNow* Magazine

Permission to Reprint

Guidelines for the use of LawNow material on websites, in any electronic format, or in print

The contents of LawNow Magazine and LawNow Online are protected by copyright and may only be used with permission of the Legal Resource Centre.

Advance approval is needed for each item or article. We reserve the right to refuse requests to reuse material. Blanket permissions are seldom granted.

To seek permission to use any material from LawNow Magazine or LawNow Online that is to be reproduced in print or in any other electronic format, contact us at lawnow@ualberta.ca

The application for reprint must include:

1. The name of the article
2. The volume, issue and page number of the article(s) you are requesting
3. The author's name
4. A description of how you intend to use the material, including the length of time it will appear on any website
5. The URL of the website (if appropriate)
6. An explanation of where on your site you intend to post the article
7. Your contact information which should include the name of the person responsible, mailing address, e-mail address, and phone number

The article must appear exactly as it is provided to you, with no editing, rewriting or condensation. Photos and graphics, if provided, must appear exactly as they are provided with no cropping or digital altering.

There must be no indication that the Legal Resource Centre endorses your company, organization, or website.

April 2007

If you are seeking permission to incorporate LawNow articles in whole or in part on a website or in any electronic format, a number of conditions apply; some are listed below.

Some of these conditions include:

1. LawNow will provide an electronic copy of the article for posting or reprint. Articles are not to be downloaded from the site.
2. LawNow reserves the right to approve the location and format of the article prior to making it available in print or electronic form.
3. Material approved for website display is normally for a period of one year from the date of approval. Unless a new permission is granted, and additional reprint fees paid, the article must be removed at the end of the agreement. Exceptions may be granted for electronic databases used for research and accessible by the general public.
4. Any article posted electronically must include the following information immediately below the title:
 - i. Author name
 - ii. Author affiliation
 - iii. Reprinted with permission from LawNow
 - iv. LawNow (shown as an active link followed by Volume #, Issue #, Page #)
 - v. This must all be no smaller than HTML heading size #4

Example: www.lawnow.org Volume 30, Issue 3, Page 3-4

5. Normally, pictures and graphics will not be included with the article, but if they are, they must carry appropriate credit lines for the artist or photographer.
6. Other conditions may be required depending upon the nature of the request.

Rates for Reprints or Reposting

Fees for reproduction may vary depending upon usage and the nature of your organization. Non-profit agencies and agencies with a mandate for public legal education may be granted exceptions to the rate. If permission is granted on a non-fee basis, an additional statement to that effect must be added.

LAW NOW

relating law to life in Canada

April 2007

For professional and for profit organizations:

Each article, for one reprint- $100.

Each article for posting for one year- $150.

For non-profit and public legal education organizations, please contact us.

Contact information:

LawNow Magazine
201-10350 124 Street
Edmonton AB T5N 3V9

Dr. Diane Rhyason
Associate Publisher
LawNow
Phone 780.451.5285
Fax: 780.451.2341
diane.rhyason@ualberta.ca

Lesley Conley
Production Manager
LawNow
Phone: 780.451.3904
Fax: 780.451.2341
lesley.conley@ualberta.ca

Celebrating 30 years
1975 - 2005

